Headline:
Showers, heavy at times, with risk of thunder.

Today:
A mainly cloudy start with limited brighter spells, as early rain in the east clears away. Showers pushing eastwards through the morning, some of these heavy, with a risk of hail, thunder and gusty winds. Showers becoming more isolated later. Maximum temperature 17 deg C (63 deg F).

Tonight:
Isolated showers at first, then persistent and occasionally heavy rain moving east and clearing. Further rain moving south into the region through the early hours. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Thursday:
Early rain clearing, then colder and breezier but with bright or sunny spells. Scattered showers most likely towards the east, with coastal gales developing. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Bright with sunny spells Friday, isolated showers for a time, winds easing. Dry with further spells of sunshine Saturday, windier but milder later. Rain Sunday morning, heavy showers possible later.
